Among the Mexican prisoners brought to France by the transport Rhone, is a young Indian woman, only twenty-three years of age, who was Lieutenant-Colonel of the regiment of Zacatecas, and who, in the course of en years, rose step by step from the ranks er courage and talents. She followed her husband to the army, and was soon promoted to the rank of Second Lieutenant for her distinguished bravery. The death of her husband, killed in action, afforded her an opportunity of avenging him and of rising another step. The French defeat at Guadalupe on the th of May, 1862, obtained for her the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel, second in command of a regiment, in which position she again greatly distinguished herself during the siege of Puebla. This singular woman handles the sword like a first-rate fencing master, and she made herself not only respected but feared by her soldiers, who looked upon her as a supernatural being. After Ortega surrendered at discretion at Puebla, she was brought to Vera Cruz, and was lodged on board the Rhone until that vessel sailed for France. Her order of embarkation mentions her rank and gives richto sit at the field officers' table. aid to be of agreeable personal appear-

The ovation given to Major-General Banks by the school children of New Orleans, n the 15th, is described as a very pleasant affair. It took place in the hall of the girls' high school, which was tastefully decorated. A silver goblet was presented to General Banks, and there were speeches and songs, the whole ending in a grand rush of the young ladies for a kiss from the General. The New Orleans correspondent of the New York Times ends his description of the affair by saying: "Let General Banks but continue his present course of tempering justice with mercy, and I sanguinely look forward to the day when he will be as much beloved here, not only by the children, but the entire population of redeemed and disenthralled Louisiana, as was ever any man of Southern birth, not even excepting the great Henry Clay."

Correspondence of the Louisville Journal. FROM ROSECRANS' ADVANCE. STEVENSON, ALA., Aug. 29, 1863.

At last we confront the enemy on the line f the Tennessee. It has been his boast for a ong time that if the abandonment of Tullahoma and other points between there and here became necessary, rallying every able-bodied Southron for a final struggle, he would hurl across the river defiance at our "invading hordes," and welcome the Union armies "with bloody hands to hospitable graves."

Our advance was an arduous and tedious one. Obstacles that appeared almost insurmountable were overcome; an immense area of country was traversed; and this powerful Colossus, moved by the hand of an accomplished leader, found itself within sight of the enemy's camp fires. Our line is an extended one, reaching from Pikeville on the northeast o Larkinsville on the south, a distance o about one hundred and fifty miles. Every point of importance from right to left is known and fully understood by the General, who has himself ridden on horseback almost the entire length of the line inspecting works, selecting oints of crossing, and frequently directing e labors of the workmen.

The vigilance of our cavalry that guard the flanks is such as to render sudden forays on our line a hazardous undertaking on the part of the enemy, and while our pickets closely watch the rebels that hold the opposite bank of the Tennessee, all the forces necessary to an early completion of the work are preparing pontoons, repairing wagons, and putting everything in readiness for crossing the river and climbing the steep, rough mountains on the

To any one who has seen these declivitous slopes, only accessible by the narrow defiles that the rebel artillery already guards, the work of throwing over an army as great as this cannot but be regarded as a perilous and arduous one. The mind that plans and the arduous one. The mind that plans and the hand that directs the movements of this mighty mass of men and baggage has this work to do, and when the co-operation of other forces that are not at present in full com-munication with us dictates, the task will be in course of accomplishment.

The Chicago Evening Journal, in publishing a full and tolerably accurate report of the direction taken by our troops, after breaking camp at Winchester, has given to the public, ignorantly of course, just what all reporters were charged not to publish, a statement of the position of our troops on the Tennessee. Had General Burnside arrived within cooperating distance is the same time our army reached the Tennessee the report published in the Journal could not have been detrimental. But, not content with this, the Journal's reporter divides a portion of the General's eporter divulges a portion of the General's esigns, and notifies the public that our forces on the right will be pushed rapidly across the country, through Northwestern Georgia, to Rome, when Bragg, frightened by the appearance of a flanking army under Burnside, shall retire his army in that direction. The policy that would dictate a relinquishment on the part of Bragg of his present base, without risking an engagement in an attempt to hold it, I cannot understand. Rome, it is true, is an important point, having for a long time been the principal depot of the Confederacy for the manutacture of arms and munitions of war. The machinery there explains the of war. The machinery there could not be transported to another point and put into operation as rapidly as would comport with the nterests of the rebel service, and hence it will be an object to Bragg to put forth every exer-tion to defend it. Fortifications have been erected, and an immense amount of labor and skill employed in the effort to render it impregnable. The futility of the effort is evident rom these facts: First, the place is as readily lanked as Chattanooga, and affords not half finnhed as Chattanooga, and affords not half so secure a line of retreat.

The town is situated on the north side of Etowah river, just in the angle at the confluence of that stream, and the Oostanaula.

In case of a retreat becoming necessary, pontoons should be in readiness, and they would be in constant danger of destruction by our artillery, or sudden dashes of our enterprising mounted forces. Secondly our less than the second of the second o sing mounted forces. Secondly, our long range guns, equal in capacity to anything in possession of the enemy, and worked with a precision that cannot be excelled, could level the city, while the enemy's works were en-tirely ignored. To defend Rome, therefore, the line of the Tennessee must not be aban-

Bragg occupies at present the most defensie position possible for him to obtain. The rds and defiles along the river, defended as Chattanooga has been carefully fortified. Eight splendid earthworks can be plainly seen on the south side of the city, besides a contin-uous line of rifle-pits that command the ap-proach to the place. The river is not easily bridged, and the superior advantages of the rebels, who have selected their own points of defence, and the withering fire that can be poured down upon the crossing forces, dictate, appears to me, an attempt on the enemy's art to hold their present base.

The "Holson (Tenn.) Telegraph" failed, it seems, to suggest the programme that Gen.

Rosecrans would adopt in the prosecution of the campaign. It looked for the appearance of a Federal column in East Tennessee from the Army of the Cumberland, by way of Sparta, and the occupation of Knoxville, never dreaming, apparently, that Burnside would do that work and enable Rosecrans to advance rith his army intact. The advanced column f Burnside's army has already appeared at Kingston and communication has been opened with him by courier. I presume that not many days will pass ere the grand movement of the two armies will have begun. I am induced to believe, from the meagre drippings of the official conservatory that I have harbored, that a portion of the co-operating army has been delayed in East Tennessee, and that uckner has not yet been definitely or satistorily disposed of. The work of preparing boats along the river for the construction of pontoons progresses admirably. The General's quarters hourly swarm with informants, and their reports, together with a multitude of despatches that pour in upon him from all quarters, give no time for "otium cum dignitate."

Deserters are constantly coming in, and represent that the demoralization of the rebel army will not justify Bragg in risking an engagement. They concur in saying that the general belief is that Joe Johnston is sending cements to Bragg. It is also reported that Johnston is strengthening the defences at Atlanta, while Bragg delays as much as possible the advance of Rosecrans.

If the Tennessee is abandoned, the enemy Chatabootchie. On the night of the 26th the rebels were erecting new works at Chatta-nooga, and on the following day worked their parties wherever they could be employed without exposure to our shells and sharp-

Immediately after the occupation of this side of the river by our pickets an armistice by mutual consent was declared, and while both parties retained their positions merely in performance of legitimate picket duty, no advantage was to be taken by either of the exposure of persons to fire. The arrangement was a pleasant one and satisfactory to both, since both parties bathed in the river without danger of injury, exchanged newspapers, and held lengthy chats while enjoying the luxury of a bath. A few evenings since, General Rosecrans, accompanied by his staff and a few friends, ran down to Bridgeport on the train and repaired to the bank of the river to hear the conversations between the pickets. A malicicusly disposed miscreant who command ed the rebel pickets discovered the party, and, though cognizant of the existing arrangement referred to, ordered his men to fire. The pick-et opposite, averse to such a base and perfidious et opposite, averse to such a base and perndious violation of the truce, before obeying the order, stepped out from his shelter and halloced across, "Look out boys, we have orders to fire now." And in another moment a ball had whistled past the ear of the General's son and burieditself in an adjacent tree. The General is constantly incurring such dangers, and though the advantage accruing from a personal knowledge of situations is from a personal knowledge of situations is more valuable than that obtained in any through a country, the very stones of which, had they tongues, would babble of his whereabouts and attempt his surprise. Among the multitude of perplexing embarassments that daily beset the Provost Marshal General are the continuous streams of applica-tions by destitute families for transportation tions by destitute lamines for transportation to the North. As a matter of charity, Col. Miles has been in the habit of relieving these indigent people, by furnishing rations and transportation to Louisville. So general is the destitution, so pressing the wants of the people, and so cheerless the prospect of mainaining an existence in this county during he coming winter, that hundreds have emaced the opportunity so kindly presented by e Colonel, and taken their families North. Women with children, hard enough to grate." Women with children, half naked and scorched by the broiling sun, are coming into camp almost every day, and telling us—truly I have no doubt—that they have eaten nothing but the little mite that more fortunate neighbors kindly gave them. There are loyal Tennesseeans, whose homes are far removed from the din of battle and the destitution that accompanies armiss who are far removed from the din of battle and the destitution that accompanies armies, who are amply able to contribute to the relief of these suffering ones. It is a matter that addresses itself not alone to the people of Tennessee, but to Kentuckians and Ohioans, and to all whose veins contain a drop of "the milk of human kindness." Genuine philanthropy is not circumscribed by geographical lines. It is not chary or niggardly in its donations, nor does it tolerate distinction on account of nationality or sentiment.

tionality or sentiment. Its munificence knows no bounds, while its resources are not impaired, and hence the authorities will look for aid from the good people of the North. If a fund is established for the relief of these persons, and placed in the hands of Governor Johnson or some other re-sponsible party at Nashville, Col. Miles will heerfully take upon himself the duty of issung transportation to all destitute families who sire to make their homes in the North. H services have been solicited for the performance of this task, and been kindly tendered. I trust the subject will not fail to attract the attention it deserves, for it affects the welfare of those, who, neglected, must starve.

CAMP IN SEQUATCHIE VALLEY, TENN.,) August 22, 1863. August 22, 1863. Gen. Hazen returned this morning from the banks of the Teanessee. He paid his compliments to the rebs stationed at Harrison's Landing by way of a few shells, which he dropped among them. Wilder, also, changed shots in front of Chattanooga, but more than this Wilder had the good fortune to capture a small forage train belonging to the enemy also forty forage train belonging to the enemy, also forty prisoners, and a small herd of beef cattle. It is also reported that our forces have been feeling the enemy from Bridgeport. Surmises are floating round the camp quite thickly, some avowing that the rebs have evacuated Chattanooga, and others that they are being reinforced by Johnston and his command. O course we know nothing definitely, as we are fully thirty miles from the river, yet it is probable that we will be allowed to be in at the

Our camp is full of life. The men are ways. The violin, the flute, the fife, and the bugle may be heard in our camp almost any moment between retreat and tattoo. The weather is so intensely warm that the men are very glad to take shelter in their little dog-tents during the day from the fierce rays of the sun. A great many citizens visit our camp every day. All of them profess to be Union men, though some of them acknowledge they have been in the rebel army, but plead in extenuation that they were into the ranks against their will. profess to be refugees who have been hid in the mountains to avoid the conscription. Some have sad stories to tell of persecution and oppression. From one I learned the particulars of the death of the Rev. Mr. Blair, for many years a prominent Baptist minister in this county. It appears that Mr. Blair, although a Northern man and a slaveholder, was still a lover of his country and a Union man. In order, however, to assure himself that our Government did not intend to trespass upon the rights of the South by visited Kentaler where rights of the South he visited Kentucky, where he saw for himself the workings of the gov-ernment. He had but just returned from his visit to that State when he was waited upon by a roving conscription party, who wished him to enter the Southern army. He replied firmly and manfully: "I would rather die than fight against my government." The of-ficer asked him if that was his final answer. He replied that it was. "Then die," said the officer, as he levelled his revolver and blew his brains out. This brutal murder occurred in the house of the deceased, with his family as witnesses. Was ever a more dastardly deed committed by mortal man? I would rather make my hed upon the bettest for officer's conscience, and vet there are persons who will defend such conduct, ay, in my own loved Kentucky there are those who can always find some extenuating circumstance to defend rebel murders and bushwhackers. Of this latter class I would say one word. A bushwhacker is a murderer. The man who lays concealed in the fence corner and awaits the approach of a fellow mortal that he may shoot him down is no more or less than a cold-blooded murderer. No war can legalize such murder. No public opinion can make it honorable and no make it honorable and no make it honorable. orable, and no man, save a coward who dare

Aug. 24.—We have been quiet in this good little valley for some time—no news from the outer world reaches us. We know not who prespers; we hear not who fails. It is tedious indeed to know that your whole world is your camp; no letters from our friends, no papers, and no news. This is to enjoy in the midst of society that solitude which poets have sung of, and which Cowper makes Selkirk rail against. News! news! a startling cry in this little tented world of ours; and yet 'tis true. The mail has come at last, with its ten thousand words of love and kindness, with its weight papers for a great many, and, blessed sight, any which have been seen in our valley; thut the old and new are ever intermixed. The old day goes, the new day shakes off the marthe cf darkness and comes more bright and beautiful, while the death of the old is un-

STREET FIGHT AT FRANKFORT.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Sept. 4, 1863. Our usually very quiet little city was this merning thrown from its propriety, for a time, by a street fight between a well-known cler-gyman and a "man about town." It seems that, a short time since, the individual made some statements with regard to the clergy man and a young lady of the city, which was of a character not to be relished by watchful mammas of said clergyman's flock. On being applied to he gave the divine a writing supposed by the public to have bee a retraction of the statements. The morning they met on the streets in front of the Capitol, when the man who had given the statement asked the preacher to let him see it, and on getting hold of it tore it into small pieces. A quarrel ensued, which scon ripened into a fight, the clergyman commencing by throwing stones at the other, who drew a pistol; and the affray might have ter-minated seriously but for the interference of Augast 26th.—Sir: I have the honor to report that we have destroyed the blockade-running schooner "Alex Cooper" under the following circumstances: On the 12th I made a reconnoïssance with boats in "New Topsail Inlet", and was driven out by four pieces of nlet," and was driven out by four pieces of artillery stationed opposite its mouth, but not before I had discovered a schooner at a wharf some six miles up the Sound. The schooner I determined to destroy, and, as it was so well guarded, I concluded to use strategy.

On the evening of the 22d, the "Shockokon" anchored close into the sea-beach, about five miles from the Inlet, and I sent ashore two boats' crews, who shouldered the "dingue" and carried it across the neck of land that di-vides the sea from the sound. This way is about half a mile in width and covered with some miles in the rear of the artillery force guarding the entrance. The "dingue" being launched in the inside water, six men under my executive officer, Ensign Jos. J. Cowry, started with orders to destroy or capture anything that could be of use to the enemy. Now it seems that a 12-pounder howitzer was situated at the point for which we were examining, and, the smoke stack of my steamer having been seen over the trees, the ommandant of the fort, Capt, Adams, had came down from the main camp to insure a bright lookout. While the rebels at the schooner's anding about sixty (60) yards from the wharf into the rebel camp and counted the men, and baving returned to his shipmates a charge was ordered, and our seamen poured on them with a shout. In a moment the enemy, who outnumbered us three to one, were routed, leaving in Mr. Cowry's possession ten priva-teers, including Captain Adams and Lieut. Latham, one 12-pounder, an army howitzer, eighteen horses, one schooner, and some ex-tensive salt works. Mr. Cowry then threw

They settled the matter, however, by picking out the three best-looking ones, who all turned out to be privates; so the officers owed their safety to their lack of physiognomy—a new feature in military strategy. While this was beach side, under the acting master's mate, found fit to engage and repulse the rebel pick-probably has received no damage. RACHEL.-I have had the pleasure of frequently meeting Rachel in society, and cer-tainly it was impossible to have seen any one more high bred in appearance, dress, and There was nothing exaggerated in her style of dress, which was always of rich material, but in perfect taste. She generally, n order to conceal the excessive spareness tifully shaped, was generally adorned only by her thick, waving hair. Her eyes were very deeply set, and too jet black to be soft and deasing; her profile was regular in its outline, out her face was long and narrow, and bore vident traces of its Jewish origin. She had very small, well formed hands, with ong, thin, tapering fingers, and pink nails, remarkably bien soignes. Her manner in a draw ing room was particularly quiet, pleasing, and lady like. She was neither forward nor ser-vile, never forcing herself on any one's acquaintance, and yet never accepting a posi-tion of humiliation. I could completely un-derstand how thoroughly English society had been taken in during her first visit to London, and how the most strait-laced dowagers had invited her, almost on a footing of intimacy to their houses and select parties. It is tru that she had not then completely thrown all appearances of propriety to the winds, as in her later career. I think I may say, without abjecting myself to any accusation of scan dal or exaggeration, that no woman ever went teyond Rachel in immorality. I have heard men say that it was just that contrast between her "company" manners, so distinguished, graceful, and dignified, and the coarse ribald tone which she assumed when at might have studied virtue, and instead of feigning to be better than she really was, i seemed to be her glory to show to her ad mirers the darkest shades of her character and make them kneel down and worship the idol of mud they had set up. Rachel exercised a wonderful power over numerous admirers, whom she took no pains to blind or

Major-General Grant: My DEAR GENERAL: I do not remember that you and I ever met, personally. I write this now, as a grateful acknowledgment for the al-most inestimable service you have done the country. I wish to say a word further. When you first reached the vicinity of Vicksburg, I thought you should do what you finally did, march the troops across the neck, run the batteries with the transports, and thus go below; and I never had any faith, except a general hope that you knew better than I, that the Yazue Pass expedition, and the like, could succeed. When you got below and took Port Gibson, Grand Gulf, and vicinity, I thought you should go down the river and join Gen. Banks; and when you turned northward, east of the Big Black, I thought it was a mistake. I now wish to make the personal

THE SPEAKERSHIP OF THE NATIONAL HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES .- The Detroit Free Press, the very able organ of the Democracy of Michigan, says: There is some discussion in the papers respecting the selection of a Democratic candidate for the Speakership of the next House of Representatives. Among the rest, the Louisville Journal, the old Whig organ of Kentucky, suggests the name of the Hon. Mr. Mallory, of that State, who was a member of the last Congress, and has just been elected the last Congress, and has just been elected to the next one.

Without wishing or intending to express a choice, or to influence others in their preference for the Speakership, we like the political significance of the recommendation of the Kentucky journal, as it suggests a policy which ought to be wisely considered by all the opponents of the abolition policy of the administration. In the present condition of the country, the Border State Platform, by which we mean the platform of the Union men of the we mean the platform of the Union men of the Border Slave States, looks to be the most feasible and practicable ground upon which the Democratic party of the country can unite, and restore peace, union, and the constitution the breach between the North and the South They are equally opposed to abolition and secession, and they are, by the force both of principle and interest, in favor of the earliest mind. ossible peace consistent with the preservation of the Union and the constitution. And what is the Border State policy?

This question our Democratic contemporary of Kentucky at the session of 1862:

in any other mode. The original State organizations, with all their just rights and powers under the Federal Constitution, must be preserved. Hence, Kentucky deplores and condemns, in this great struggle for constitutional liberty, all attempts to abolish or alter, in the least respect, the relative position of any of the States toward each other or the Federal government, and especially does she condemn, in unqualified terms, any effort to reduce any of the States to a colonial or territorial condi-

Therefore be it further resolved That our Senators and Representatives in Congress be requested to use all their power and influence to defeat all measures which may be presented to their body to destroy any of the States, or to deprive them of any of their just powers or rights under the established form of the national government.

Having made the citations we have mentioned, the Free Press adds:

These sentiments pervade the great Union party, composed of both Democrats and Whigs, in-Missouri, Kentucky, Maryland, and Virginia. Cannot and ought not the patri-otic opponents of the Sumner-Whiting abo-lition policy to unite together on the basis of ents and opinions like those published

To this interrogatory, we answer emphatically: THEY CAN, AND THEY OUGHT TO. And we firmly believe that they will. We have never heretofore for a moment doubted this result; and certainly we cannot doubt it now when influential Democratic leaders in all quarters of the North are so directly confirming our cherished conviction. One thing at least is certain; and, though we have said it before, we will repeat it, for it cannot be uttered too frequently or too distinctly. Let the great conservative party of the country but unmistakably plant itself upon the Border State Platform in the Presidential canvass of next year, and the radi cal party will go down never to rise again, while the Union and the Constitution will rise never again to go down. And we cherish a perfectly unfaltering faith that the four per cent on those subject to ten days' notice of great conservative party of the country will unmistakably plant itself upon the Border State Platform.

It would be chiefly as the promoter and harbinger of this result that we should hail with especial pleasure the selection of Mr. Mallory as the conservative candidate for the Speakership. Yet a fitter man in all other respects cannot be found in the conservative FRESH GOODS! ranks of the House. His fitness as a whole is pre-eminent. We are not surprised that the suggestion of his name awakens a responsive echo in so many quarters of the North. The fact is unquestionably a very auspicious one.

We gave some facts and statements on Saturday as to the reported project of a rebel raid into Kentucky through Cumberland Gap and perhaps Pound Gap. Such a raid has long been expected both by our loyal and our disloyal citizens to take place as soon as the two conditions of good roads and the desired maturity of the corn harvests should exist. These conditions now exist or will very soon. Goods, selected from full Eastern stocks. We have Of course it is our duty to be on the vigilant lookout for the dash of the foe. We hear of facilities, and now hope to be able to fill all orders guerilla bands prowling and plundering in va- for SHIRTS more promptly. rious counties of our State already, and these are not unlikely to be the forerunners of far more formidable forces.

We can at present see no possible room to doubt the speedy occurrence of an invasion in considerable force. Gen. Preston, it is known, has been for months at the head of quite a strong body of troops threatening us from near Abingdon. Those who know his military experience and character in the rebel Confederacy know that he is not an officer to Confederacy know that he is not an officer to threaten and not do his best to fulfil his PRATHER & SMITH threats. There is not a more gallant and dashing General than he in the rebel service, and he is strongly prompted to invade Kentucky and if possible sweep through it not only by the thought that it would secure to the rebel cause an immense advantage and to himself a large share of the kind of "glory" he covets, but by the consideration that in this State he has large possessions which he regards himself as having been despoiled of, and which he is burning to recover. We may be assured then that he will strike at the very first opportunity, and it is not easy to conceive that he can reasonably look for a better opportunity than he has now or will very shortly have. Gen. Burnside's army has moved far into Tennessee; the two Kentucky regiments guarding those sections of the State through which Gen. Preston would wish first to pass are about to be disbanded on account of the expiration of their term of enlistment; and hence this or a period very close at hand would seem to be the very time that Gen. P. would especially covet.

It is therefore our duty to ourselves, as well as to the holy cause to which we have devoted ourselves, to be prepared for danger. We don't see, and we can't learn, what and where Kentucky's defences are, though unquestionably we should see and learn much if the emergency were to come. We hear of no adequate Federal forces starting up in the vicinities or sections where rebel depredations are committed and rushing to the rescue or to vengeance, and the brave and patriotic Burnside, whose military rule embraces Kentucky, is, as we have said, hundreds of miles away and in a situation of such vast importance that he can divert no portion of his attention from what is immediately before him to what is going on in this State. All his great energies are undoubtedly taxed to the atmost where he is, and hence we must not at present look wholly to his guiding mind and the Army of the Ohio for safety. Would to God we had Gen. Rousseau now in our State at the head of 20,000 mounted infantry. But mere regrets or anxious desires are useless. We want the requisite physical force, and, if it is not now within reach, the high Powers to whom the guardianship of the Union belongs should look to the matter and act upon

3ilt Frames, Cornices, Pier and Mantle Mirrors, Ornamental Gilding, and Composition Work,

In times of peril, every man, instead of shutting both eyes, should prepare to shut one while the other runs along the barrel of a good rifle. We should consider no portion of Kentucky secure. If John Morgan with four thousand men could dash through a large part of Kentucky, through the whole length of Indiana, and through the whole extent of Ohio, putting all the Indiana and Ohio cities and towns in mortal fear, and at length reaching the Ohio river to be driven back only by the half-accidental presence of Federal gunboats, our people can judge what part or whether any part of our State would be safe if Gen. Preston, a far abler commander than Morgan and at the head of a far larger force than Morgan, were to rush among us upon an errand of conquest and destruction. As for Louisville, she needs the home troops which she had for a few brief days and the fortifications that she never had. The neglect to provide better for the defence of a city so exposed as this, and so important to the government in a strategic view as this, is one of the most extraordinary of all the military phenomena of these most extraordinary times.

Since writing the article above, we have been glad to learn that Gen. Burnside, when he went to Tennessee, left here a sufficient number of veteran troops to render the body of Kentucky secure against any force that General Preston or any other Confederate General is at present likely to be able to bring into the State. Our apprehensions are in a great measure allayed, but we will not supto the country. It is plain to see that the great measure allayed, but we will not sup-Union men of the Border Slave States stand in press what we have written, for it perhaps suggests some considerations which the authorities and people would do well to keep in

It is rumored among politicians in Richmond that Robert M. T. Hunter will be sent to Mexico as the representative of the answers by citing the opinions of Governor | Southern Confederacy, in order to prepare the Bramlette and of several other public men of | way for an offensive and defensive alliance the Border States, with the following resolu- between the Emperor of that country and the tions adopted unanimously by the Legislature government of Richmond. It is said that this gentleman has received instructions for the Resolved. That it is the deliberate opinion of Kentucky, that the only hope for the restoration of the national Union is upon that great charter of our freedom, the Constitution of the United States. It cannot be accomplished in any other mode. The original States are also seed that the future Emperor of Mexico, in return for which it is hoped his Majesty will be led to recognize the Southern Confederacy.

It would certainly be a good joke if the rebel Confederacy, unrecognized itself by any Power on earth, were to undertake to set up the business of recognition. But the rumor given above isn't unlikely.

It is a fact that the leaders of the rebellion have actually appointed a commission in East Tennessee to accompany the agents of the conscription and examine the women to ascertain whether they are not men in disguise. A commission should be appointed to cut open the paunches of such scoundrels and examine their entrails to see whether they have the forms of men inside as well as outside.

A notorious Mississippi guerilla, Col. Amos R. Johnson, has been appointed to the command of such members of John Morgan's old division as are out of the penitentiary. Little did the prophet Amos dream of ever having a horse-thief for a namesake.

A letter-writer denies that Gen. Rosecrans swears. Certainly that gallant officer never swears profanely, but we guess, that, when he knows a man to be a damned "scoundrel, he doesn't long hesitate to say so."

OUR CITY HIGH SCHOOLS .- Many of our citizens, who are anxious to avail themselves | sented on his catalogue. The Caldwell Instiof the superior advantage of these excellent tute, now that our State is quiet, offers great institutions, are under the impression that pre- inducements for parents and guardians to vious attendance of the Ward schools is a patronize it. prerequisite to admission to the High Schools. This is a mistake. The only conditions are a residence in Louisville, or that the parent or guardian is a tax payer in Louisville, and that the candidate pass a satisfactory examination. Those who wish to enter these schools may yet procure certificates of admission of the Superintendent on Monday morning. Parents who wish further information in regard to the Male High School may consult Doctor Grant, the Principal, at his office in the college building, corner of Ninth and Chestnut streets. In the absence of Principal Chase, of the Female High School, Prof. Hailman will represent him at the Female High School.

· The public schools in this city will open on Monday morning. The school heretofore occupying the premises on the corner of Main and Seventeenth streets has been removed to the south side of Market street, between Seventeenth and Eighteenth, in the building owned by Mr. Bollinger. All the other schools will retain the same buildings they had last session. The military authorities expect to give up the public school houses now occupied by them as hospitals in the course of four or six weeks. The schools, the ensuing year. will be under the charge of the following experienced and successful educators: Fulton street school, Mr. W. H. Bartholo-

WOOD'S THEATRE-The Holman Troupe .ter begs leave to inform her customers and the public in general that she has received one of the largest stocks of Millinery Goods ever brought to this city, to which she re-spectfully invites their attention. No. 327 These popular artists are re-engaged for six nights more, and will appear this evening in Balte's beautiful opera of the Bohemian Girl. We have never seen the Holmans in this opera, but if the papers of other cities are any guide, we shall certainly have an opportunity for enjoying a great musical feast. This piece was performed by them for six consecutive nights to dense and fashionable audiences in Cincinnati, Miss Sallie surpassing all her former fame in her rendition of the role of Arline. We remember with pleasure the beautiful melodies. "I dreamt that I dwelt in Marble Halls," "When other Lips," "The Heart bowed Down," and "The Fair Land of Poland," besides the superb Gipsy choruses, all of which will be given this evening, and will bring to mind the happy days gone by. We bespeak a full house for this popular troupe.

THE FAIR GROUNDS .- We passed Saturday afternoon at this delightful resort, and were glad to see that everything was assuming the morning will accomplish much. Try IT. s5 old look of beauty and comfort. Floral Hall has been elegantly refitted, and florists are at work decorating it with evergreens, while the taste of Mr. Lawrence Young will be directed in the preparation of the tables for fruit and vegetable display. The amphitheatre and the race-course have been relaid and rolled so that they will both be in excellent order. Power Hall, under the able superintendence of Mr. William Lennox, will offer every desirable advantage for the showing of all kinds of machinery. The Fair Grounds should terminate the evening drive of our citizens during the week, that they may witness the preparations for the State Fair, which commences to-morrow week.

TRIED TO ESCAPE .- Thos. Rice, of the Sixtyninth Indiana, was convicted of horse-stealing at Rockport, Ind., and sentenced to four years' imprisonment in the Jeffersonville Penitentiary. He was put on board the Hetty Gilmore, in charge of the Sheriff, but when at a point twelve miles below New Albany, although handcuffed, he jumped overboard into the river and struck out for the shore. The Sheriff took the Gilmore's yawl and started after him, ordering him to halt, which order met with refusal. The officer shot at him without effect. He was captured, however, a few hundred yards from the shore, and brought up to the Prisoz, where he will doubtess serve out his time.

LOUISVILLE THEATRE. - Miss Charlot'e Thompson, the talented young actress, whose personations last season attracted so much attention, commences an engagement this eveng, appearing as Pauline, in Bulwer's Lady yons. She has Little Barefoot, Clouds have Silver Linizgs, and other novelties in attention of his friends and the public preparation, and we hope she will play a successful engagement. Manager Fuller has gone to the eastward to secure artists in place of some who have shamefully broken their engagements. - In the meantime Mr. and Mrs. Vanderen, Mr. McManus and other old favorites will appear temporarily.

The Medical Department of the University of Louisville will open its session on the first Monday in October, which will continue four months. This will be the twentyseventh annual session of the Department, and the national reputation which it has acquired and the large number of its graduates living in all portions of the country, are the best arguments to be applied in its behalf now. We look confidently for no further disturbing elements to interrupt our social or educational

TOUNG MEN, TAKE PARTICULAR NOTICE.—
Dr. H devotes much of his time to the treatment of those cases caused by a secret habit which ruins both body and mind, unfitting the unfortunate individual for either business or society. The sad effects of these early habits, or the excess of riper years, are to weaken and debilitate the constitution. destroy the physical and mental powers, diminish and enfectle the natural feelings, and exhaust the vital energies of manhood: the preasures of life are marred, the object of marriage frustrated, and existence itself rendered a term of unceasing misery and regret. Such persons, especially those contemplating marriage, should lose no time in making immediate application, as Dr. H., by his new treatment, is enabled to secure a speedy and permanent cure.

Cffice of Quartermaster General for the State of Kentucky,

FRANKFORT, July 16, 1963.

THE NUMBER OF CLAIMS AGAINST THE Government of the United States heretofore sent me for collection, which I have been forced to return, being so great, and believing that my position will enable me to collect them at a much less expense to the holder than the discounts to which they have heretofore been compelled to submit, I have now concluded to employ in my office a competent person to audit and collect all such claims as may hereafter be sent me. All Quartermaster's vouchers, Commissary's certificates, Pay and Bounty due deceased soldiers, and claims of all kinds will receive prompt attention.

Arrangements will be made with Officers of the Government to secure prompt and speedy payment of such claims.

Knewing that I can thus benefit the citizens of my claims.

Knowing that I can thus benefit the citizens of my State, I respectfully request that all who hold ovidences of debt of any kind against the Government will send them at once to my address for collection.
